“Alex is one of the best professors I’ve had. He knows a lot about the course and explains everything very well. If you don’t get something he will go over it again during the next class time.”

“I always was warned about this class [Intro. to Ethics at Towson] because it was a required course and it is very hard to understand and follow the concepts. Our professor is very experienced and has a very good understanding of the topics discussed and he went over things multiple times in different ways to make sure that everyone was on the same page and understood. He prepared us for passing and doing well.”

“This course challenged the way I looked into my daily activities. I could relate a lot of my relationships and characteristics to some of the concepts we had learned. I have also used concepts from this class in other classes, such as my women’s studies class.”

“This course makes you think about your daily life in ways you’ve never thought of. You begin to understand why you do the things you do and what prevents you from doing certain things.”

“I liked that this course brought forth multiple points of view and compared and contrasted the potential faults and pros of them. It never felt biased or intending an agenda, it always felt like we were hearing different ideologies and allowing us to dissect them and potentially subscribe to them if we wanted.”

“In response to the question: Would you recommend this course to others? Answer: “Yes. Only if [Alex] is the instructor, he made it very interesting for people who wouldn’t be interested in this topic otherwise. He was very helpful.”
